Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health. They invigorated all vital organs, cure liver and kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at the Red Cross Pharmacy."

MARSHFIELD

Marshfield creamery paid its patrons 29 cents per pound for butterfat.

CABOT.

Deaths of Two Well Known Citizens Recently.

Orson Kimball passed away July 5 after but a few days' illness at the advanced age of 88 years. He was born in Danville and lived there until 5 years of age when his parents came to Cabot and bought the farm where his nephew, Will Adams, now lives. He was one of the family of Isaac and Jennie Kimball consisting of six boys and three girls, all of whom were prosperous, each son beginning poor himself at the age of 21 with 300 dollars.

He married Miss Susan C. Dutton of Walden and went to Barton where by careful and wise planning and good economy combined with hard work and strictly temperate habits had in five years paid for their farm besides greatly improving it. They then came to Cabot and bought the Way farm where he lived the greater part of his remaining life, erecting new buildings as the first ones were built by the Hoyt family which began the clearing of this farm. After living a few years at West Hill he bought a small place at Lower Cabot where his companion was taken away by death which necessitated his moving back to the Old Way place owned by his son-in-law, G. M. Harvey, where he spent his last years with his children and grandchildren. Ten years he spent buying cattle for Boston markets. His life was characteristic of the early Vermonters with marvelous capacity for hard work which he sustained until a few days of his death. He had filled important and trustworthy town offices, being looked up to by his townspeople as an honest, upright and faithful to perform any duty required of him. He leaves a son and daughter, two grandchildren and one great-grandchild, who can well say "His work is well done." Funeral services were held at his home, Rev. W. T. Sparhawk officiating. Burial was at Lower Cabot in the family lot.

Anthony Perry died at his home at Lower Cabot July 1st aged 72 years, after a few months' illness. He was the oldest son of Patten and Lucy Perry and had resided in town nearly all his lifetime, being an industrious and successful farmer and had held important town offices. Being of a genial and happy disposition he made friends wherever he went. He was a kind neighbor and will be missed in his home, in the I. O. O. F. of which he was a faithful member and many other places where a cheerful "good morning" was his usual greeting. He leaves a son and two sisters, Mrs. Laura Senter and Mrs. John Austin, both living in Manchester. His funeral was held at his home, his remains being laid beside those of his wife in upper village cemetery.

Thinking Aloud.

While, trying an old woman on a charge of stealing faggots a judge who had acquired the habit of thinking aloud unconsciously exclaimed: "Why, one faggot is as like another faggot as one egg is like another egg." The counsel defending the case heard the observation and repeated it to the jury, whereupon the judge cried, "Stop! it is an intervention of Providence. This is the very thought that passed through my mind. Gentlemen, advising the jury, acquit the prisoner."—London News.

RICKER'S MARKET.

Beef is Firm and Veal is Steady, While Hogs are a Shade Better.

St. Johnsbury, July 21.—Ricker's market reports that beef is firm and veal steady. Hogs are a shade better. Poultry sells well. Wool is easier and there is no demand for it. The receipts for the week were as follows:

Poultry, 800 pounds, 10@15c.

Lambs, 30 pounds, 3@5c.

Hogs, 450 pounds, 6@7c.

Cattle, 75 pounds, 3@4 1/2c.

Wool, 25@28c.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Receipts of Butter are Somewhat Smaller Than Last Week.

Boston, July 21.—Not much change is noted in the local market for dairy products from last week's conditions. Receipts of butter, although somewhat smaller than they were recently, are still large, but wants also are large and there is no weakness in other distributing markets or in the country to influence the dealers. The cheese market continues firm under moderate receipts and a rather better demand. Prices have not been changed, but an advance is very likely as country markets are all firmer than a week ago. Good eggs are still scarce and very firm. Receipts are moderate and still include a large percentage of ordinary goods.

Jobbing quotations follow:

Butter—Fancy northern creamery, tubs 28@30c, boxes and prints 31@32c, western tubs 28@30c, dairy 29@31c.

Eggs—Fancy hennessy, 31@32c, choice eastern 29@30c, fresh western 28@29c.

WEST NEEDS FARM HELP.

Fifty Thousand Needed to Harvest The Big Crops.

Washington, July 21.—A cry for help to harvest the season's bounteous crops comes from the West to officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor, whose functions, in part, are to find employment wherever possible for the throngs of aliens who come into this country. Fifty thousand able-bodied men are wanted by the farmers of the West, according to Representative Stevens of Minnesota, who says the West is literally begging for help to gather the big wheat and other crops. He declares that the crop situation all through the West is splendid.

UP-TO-DATE DAIRYING.

Some Things Which Should be Used and Some "Don'ts."

In dairying as in every other profession there is a need for enthusiasm and without a certain amount of this enthusiasm success is hardly to be attained. The average dairymen takes an interest in his work beyond the money he gets out of it and would be satisfied to strive for a modest living were the only return for his labors, says the Indiana Farmer. In this connection, it is well known that there are many dairymen who get only a modest living, who are generally men of little enthusiasm. Be up-to-date. Know what successful dairymen are doing.

Never use old, rusty milk vessels. It is true economy to have new pails, cans, churns, etc., and it is imperative to have everything that is used about milk and cream pure, clean and sweet. The best way to wash clean vessels in which milk is kept is to rinse first with cold water, then wash with hot water in which a tablespoonful of soda has been dissolved to one gallon. Turn the milk vessels upside down and about in this ends as it cleans them thoroughly and will destroy the germs if hot enough. After this washing rinse in clean hot water and set out of doors in the sun and air. If the milk vessels are kept hygienically pure and clean there will be no sour milk.

Different kinds of milk animals differ greatly as to the fat and solid contents of milk. Some animals have milk that is far richer than the milk of a cow, but the milk of the cow is the most popular with the man. The fact that it does not contain such a very large amount of fat is in its favor, for there is such a thing as having milk too rich for infants, invalids and even for calves. Some cows give a milk that is too rich for calves if kept upon it. More than one cow has been unable to raise her calves for this reason. It was some years before the fact was brought to light, but now the man that understands this is careful not to leave with its dam the calf of a cow giving excessively rich milk.

There is one fact about milk that should be remembered, and that is that the fat and casein are in somewhat constant ratio. This is a discovery of comparatively recent years, says the last 15. Before that time it was thought that a cow that gave poor milk in butter fat was a poor cheese cow and such were even called cheese cows. The neighborhoods that supplied milk to cheese factories bought such cows in preference to the better ones, thinking that the milk was rich in milk solids. But it has been found that the milk that is rich in fat is also rich in milk solids and that the milk that has a small percent of fat is poor in milk solids. The balance in either case in water. We now know that the milk that has a small percent of fat in it is very watery, and that it has not a single redeeming feature. If it is used in the making of cheese it produces an excessive amount of whey, while the fat and solids make a very small amount of material out of which to construct cheese.

It should be remembered that the milk cannot be increased in solids and fat by the feeding of rich food. That may increase the amount of milk given by a cow, but the percentage of watery material will remain the same and this feeding pigs. "The milk that is thin comes from a cow that is nearly always unprofitable and this fact must be realized if milk is to be produced that will be profitable for the making of either cheese or butter."

The institute of marine engineers in London recently discussed the subject, and H. A. Mayor, of Glasgow, said that the prospects for electric propulsion for ships is very hopeful. Leading shipbuilders have been considering it for some time. W. P. Durrant said that in the all-electric Paragon method of driving vessels, the electric motors are coupled direct to the propellers, and ran at equally high efficiency in either direction. Since the steam turbine can run in only one direction the new method saves the expense of a reversible turbine.

A minor drawback connected with the use of the electric station has been found to be the fact that the temperature varied considerably as it was passed from one piece of work to another containing more or less moisture. This has now been overcome by an automatic means of control by which the temperature is maintained at one point within a fraction of a degree. When the station is in use a large amount of current is permitted to pass through the heating coils, but whenever the heat rises unduly a switch automatically introduces the resistance necessary to cut down the current.

Wanted a Weeping Whale.

Capt. H. P. Nuse of the Celtic was regaling a little group of ladies with sea stories.

"One trip," he said, "there was a woman who bothered the officers and me to death about whales. Her one desire was to see a whale. A dozen times a day she begged us to have her called if a whale were in sight."

"I said rather impatiently to her one afternoon—"

"That, madam, my dear, are you so anxious about this whale question?"

"Captain," she answered, "I want to see a whale blubber. It must be very impressive to see such an enormous creature cry."—Rochester Herald.

CELEBRITIES ON MAINE COAST.

Busy Times Among Charity Workers on Mount Desert.

These are the days when the various charitable organizations get in their fine work on the summer visitors, more especially the cottage settlement, although the hotel guests are by no means exempt, especially if they have been coming to Bar Harbor steadily, says the New York Times. There are any number of public charitable and semipublic institutions which are supported in the main by subscription, and it is nothing unusual at this time for four or five subscription books to be left at the visitor's cottage door of a morning. One general and generous giver who found eight of them when he came down after breakfast to look over his morning mail began to think that he was getting too much of a good thing—or perhaps that he was too much of a good thing.

The coast of Maine seems to be a perfect Mecca for authors and literary folk this summer. The little colony at Seal Harbor has Winston Churchill and James Ford Rhodes, North-west Harbor has James Bryce, the British ambassador and author of "The American Commonwealth," President Eliot of Harvard, Seth Low, another college president and author; Bishop Greer, also known as an author, and Bishop Doane, a well-known writer of religious works. Bar Harbor numbers Mrs. Burton Harrison and Arthur C. Train, well known as writers of short fiction. William Dean Howells has opened his cottage at Kittery Point, as he has done for several summers. His home is surrounded by a fine old-fashioned garden, where he loves to work, and his library is an old remodeled barn set in the midst of an apple orchard. At York Harbor is Thomas Nelson Page, so known as an author, and Bishop Doane, a well-known writer of religious works. Bar Harbor numbers Mrs. Burton Harrison and Arthur C.
